"ON LOOKOUT."

ED. SOUTH KENTUCKIAN:

Leaving Chattanooga with a party of friends on the morning of the 27th at 7:30 o'clock we took what is known as the old road to Lookout. Not a great distance from the base of the mountain, where the driver stopped to water his horses, we were shown the spot where once stood the blacksmith shop of old Aaron Hunt made famous by the gifted Alabama Authoress, Augusta Evans, (now Mrs. Wilson); on the mountain side a little higher up on the right stood a building, a residence bearing the name of St. Elmo, a gentleman of the party told us that an effort had been made to name the little village of Kirkland, through which we had just passed, St. Elmo but as yet it had been unsuccessful. Our horses having satiated their thirst we again wind up the rugged route before us; leaving Chattanooga in the distance below us we draw nearer heaven each step. We find at the top of the road Lookout mountain house, halt here for a short while and are told that we should have witnessed a sunrise from this point, the bluish gray mists arising from the valley below, presenting the appearance of sun tinted waves are particularly beautiful. Summer Town is mentioned as a former resort of beauty, wealth and fashion, we reach a sandy road, and soon our driver again halts at the gate of the Park, the gate keeper, a woman, demands the entrance fee, 25 cents each, and we pass in, but feel that this so-called Park needs the magic wand of improvement, which could add greatly to its attractions. Col. E. W. Cole instead of Col. Ball, as stated in the last communication from your correspondent, will doubtless leave nothing undone to add to this point of interest. At the usual halting ground we leave our carriage and on foot wind our way over a rugged and wild path and bearing to the left can reach the Art Gallery, and from the observatory, a most exquisite landscape is presented to our view, and one that tourists declare cannot be beaten upon the American continent. Here we are 1700 feet above Chattanooga which is clearly defined before us in the distance. At the base of the point curves the Tennessee. The river has washed the land into the form of an Indian Moccasin, toe and heel and ankle being well defined. We pay ten cents apiece for the use of the telescope, look into Chattanooga, read clearly the time of day, watch the busy moving throng in the streets, turn from this to the entrance of the National cemetery and like a Kaleidoscope, change again through the stained glass windows of the observatory; in the language of the psalmist "we stood and measured the earth" and the masses of foliage dim and purplish in the distance, viewed through crimson and blue and purple lights make a gorgeous scene and the variegated foliage indescribably beautiful. An enthused young lady of the party having exhausted all the adjectives in her admiration of the panorama before her finally declared the hills on either side the plain in front and different hues presented were just like "the indescribable patchwork of a crazy quilt." As it was Sunday we declined having our party photographed. It was at this famous point that "the battle above the clouds" was fought, the confederates on the mountain top, the Federals in the valley, the thick mists uprising and so completely enshrouding the enemy as to render them invisible, so the confederates taken at such disadvantage were soon surrounded and we all know the result. The pulpit rock, once the signal point of the Confederates, is plainly to be seen and also the umbrella rock. We desire to linger but are reminded of an engagement to visit the camping ground of the spiritualists. We hurry back to the natural bridge springs, near this, with a back ground of huge gray limestone rock, is erected a rostrum; this is entwined with evergreens.

On the front near the top extended a white cloth bearing the inscription also in evergreens "Welcome Angels." Mrs. Talbot, of Texas, was occupying the rostrum, her theme spiritualism, she was certainly intelligent and interesting, and advocated forcibly progression, advocating work here as well as work hereafter, she did not believe the spirit life a passive one. She was followed by Miss Zaida Brown, a trance medium who recited under the control of the spirits an improvised poem, with closed eyes, but appropriate gestures, she went through the whole, unfortunately, your correspondent was unable to hear what she uttered so could not decide, as the merits of this spiritual effort.

Mrs. M. Moss Baker, of New York, was particularly interesting, and declared in her introductory remarks that she was a disembodied spirit, speaking as she was controlled, her theme was spiritualism and a defense of it, she was perfectly at home on the rostrum, having full control of voice, language and manner. She evidently, if not controlled by a monstrous spirit mind, certainly had one of her own; her lecture was replete with humor, sarcasm and argument, she did not believe we were to take the whole Bible as offered to us, but choice bits that were palatable and suitable to be set before us, she cited as an illustration having received an invitation to dine, chicken being the entire bill of fare. She found it, "cooked head feet, entrails and all" expressed her disgust in amusing style, and finally made the application, declaring she could not swallow Jonah whale and all." The greater part of her lecture was in poetry, commencing, like a parody on "where can the soul find rest," and disgressing as above. Your correspondent was anxious to obtain a copy of this poem, but was told by a spiritualist that she only recited it by inspiration, not knowing until she came upon the rostrum, what she would be called upon to say; outside of spiritualism her lecture was indeed a literary treat, eloquent and elegant in both language and address, she closed her lecture with a benediction; "May the blessing of man and woman rest upon you all."

Mrs. Silverston, of Chicago, then descended in the audience and gave tests, she declared various spirits present, described and named them. She told us that an old man, stood with his hand upon the shoulder of your correspondent, described him, and said that he told her his name was John, though he must be a relation, his kith, however, failed to recognize him if so; it is said that nothing exceeds a woman's curiosity, so your correspondent with one other lady of the party, determined to see a little more of this spiritualism so had a private sitting, and must confess to hearing some most astounding facts, and some accurate descriptions of persons not only of the past but the now, but forbear giving them to the public. We hurried from Mountain home, whither we had gone to this "Sitting," and drove for Rock city found the route rough and rugged but exceedingly picturesque. We entered by a stone gateway formed by two large rocks, sixty feet high, and about fifty feet long. Our driver goes round to the suburbs and we walk through, here the cactus grows wild, and ferns greet us on all sides. We pass on and enter a narrow ravine with high walls on each side of gray limestone rocks washed entirely smooth. In many places they are 60 feet high and not more than a foot in width. Your correspondent begs to go round the "fat man's misery," an exceedingly narrow and rough pass that leads up to the summit of the rocky battlements above. The party are inexorable, and declare that there are to be no "Lot's wives" in this party, so the inevitable is bravely faced. There are no elevators, so it requires much physical force, exerted by extended hands, and one by one we pass, "feeling like a rat in an exhausted air receiver," from one deep ravine to another, and so on to Rocky City Bluff, and just from this point is seen the wildest view of Lookout Mountain that overlooks Chattanooga. Here are in full view the Missionary Ridge and Chickamauga battle fields. Chickamauga Bluff and Balance Rock are points of interest. We pass Pin Cushion Rock, Noah's Arc, descend the Rock City Avenue to pass through a narrow gateway to find a street covered with loam and well-shaded with elms and poplars. We see the steamboat but do not try to sail, hurry out and look longingly in the direction of Lula Lake, but find we have not the time to see it, so turn our faces reluctantly toward Chattanooga, and return by the new road, and descend the mountain in quite a little storm, which has stolen upon us unawares.

OLIVE BRANCH.

Soldier Blaine.

Blaine has been making patriotic speeches up in Maine. He spoke at the re-union of the Maine veterans at Old Orchard, last Thursday, and when we remember that Blaine sent a thief as a substitute when his country called upon him to fight her battles, his gushing patriotism is enough to make a horse laugh. Here is his speech in full:

"Gentlemen of the Grand Army of Maine—I thank you for your kindly and cordial greeting. The occasion has been of greater pleasure to me in the renewal of old acquaintances and recalling old scenes of civil life than to the date of your splendid deeds of war. My mind is carried back to the winter of 1861, to the excitement of the election, and at the same time the seriousness and sadness of that ominous and critical era. I vividly remember every incident as we stood on the eve of the gigantic struggle. When at last the war-cloud burst, and President Lincoln issued a proclamation for 75,000 Maine was asked for one regiment. And Gov. Washburne summoned an extra session of the Legislature. I had the honor at that time to be Speaker of the House of Representatives. Patriotism was fervid, confidence was strong, and we young members of the Legislature (I was but thirty-one years old myself) determined to do something very bold, something that we ventured to hope would be rather appalling to the Confederate Government. Instead of responding with one regiment for which the President had asked, we authorized the Governor to offer ten regiments to the National Government, and though entirely unused to a State debt, we empowered the Governor to borrow

$1,000,000 on the faith of the State for immediate use in the equipment of troops. We all felt that we were bragging. When we used these big figures we felt sure our ten regiments would never be used for such a contingency. But it required a larger force than Napoleon and Wellington both controlled in the field of Waterloo.

Gen. Fleming, you far better than I know the sequel. Our ten regiments were swept into the vortex of war before the expiration of half a year, and we ended by sending thirty-two regiments of infantry, two regiments of cavalry and nine battalions of artillery. This, with the recruits needed to keep their ranks full in the terrible contest, absorbed more than 70,000 men of Maine. A draft almost as large in proportion to the arms-bearing population as Frederick the Great levied on the provinces of Prussia in the hardest pressed period of the seven years' war. You, gentlemen, are an honored and important part of the survivors of that great host. I join with you in commemoration of the services for the unreturning brave, for that great host who died for their country and for liberty. No victory in war ever assured so much good to mankind, none ever prevented so much evil.

The struggle is over and our triumph is celebrated with the sense of having reclaimed our kinsmen and brought them back to their own heritage and to the protection of their own flag. Beneath that flag, North and South, East and West, will all find protection. Under its sheltering folds we shall all dwell together in unity, for we are brethren."

A Mormon Massacre.

NASHVILLE, TENN., Aug. 11.—An organization established by Mormon elders, in Lewis and Hickman counties, this State, about three years ago was broken up on Sunday by the killing of all the elders by a band of masked men. Mr. Depriest, United States mail carrier between Ivy Mills and Centerville, Hickman county, gives the following account of the massacre: Three elders were holding a meeting at Conder's farm, Cane Creek Lewis county, Sunday morning, when twelve masked men on horseback rode up to the house and ordered a young man named Huston and young Conder to surrender. They showed fight, when one of the masked men knocked Conder down, breaking his skull. Huston fired at one of the masked men, who fell dead, and was afterwards found to be Dave Hinson, a citizen of Hickman county, who lived at Brushford, on Beaver Dam. The masked men then shot and killed two of the Mormon elders. The third elder ran toward the woods where the firing was soon heard. The elder not having been seen since, is supposed also to have been killed. It has since been ascertained that the masked men before going to Conder's house stopped at the house of a man named Garrett, near Conder's house, found a Mormon elder there, and left two masked men in charge of this elder. Shooting was heard there shortly afterward and the elder has not been seen since. When firing commenced at Conder's house one of the elders hid behind Mrs. Conder and in shooting at him Mrs. Conder was wounded.

Funnygraphs.

Because a man is crazy it does not follow that he is a reformer but a real reformer is apt to be considered as a crank.

Lieut. Greeley was a busy discovering Lake Arthur and the open sea Hazen, that he forgot to look up the iceberg, Charles Francis Adams.

At this season of the year considerable pastors skip to the mountains and give their congregations a much needed rest and vacation from continual preaching.

Oil City Blizzard: Why did they dig pa's grave so deep? is the title of a new song. It must have been so that the old man wouldn't hear the music.

Worcester (Mass.) Gazette: Life is like a harness. There are traces of care, lines of trouble, bits of good fortune, breaches of good manners, bridled tongues, and every one has a tug to pull through.

Whenever there is a great temperance meeting in New York, it is addressed by a Kentuckian.—[Courier Journal.] Indirectly addressed. Kentucky furnishes the whisky and the frightful example.

The composers of campaign marches have done their worst for Cleveland and Blaine. Ben Butler has ordered a Boston music writer to compose a walk-over for himself.

Norr. Herald: An American actress who arrived in London a week ago is evidently a failure there. Anyhow, her autograph and portrait have not yet appeared in the advertisement of a new brand of soap.

Burlington Free Press: "What's this thing?" asked a man who was inspecting a music store. "That's oh, that's used on violins. We call it a chin rest." "Gimme one!" exclaimed the visitor. "S'pose it would work on my wife?"

St. Paul: While a Chicago editor was writing an original piece of humor, the lightning struck the shears from his hand. We have just received a late copy of his paper and regret to see that he has secured a new pair.

Burlington Hawkeye: The girl with soft gray eyes rippling brown hair, who walked all over your poor, fluttering heart at the charity ball, has just finished a crazy quilt containing 1,064 pieces of neckties and hat-lining, put together with 21,300 stitches. And her poor old father fastens on his suspenders with a long nail, a piece of twine, a sharp stick, and one regularly ordained button.

N. O. Pic. The campaign is not all mud-flinging. Nothing but cold water will be thrown on St. John, the Prohibitionist. . . . There is no law to protect a man's name when a party of young fellows use it as a title for a base ball club that gets beaten at a match game.

New York Tribune: "A clergyman named Hoyle was so indiscreet as to register his name at one of the Baltimore hotels. Within half an hour afterward no fewer than forty-nine anxious inquirers sent up their cards up to his room begging to be informed if a flush royal couldn't get away with four aces."

Life: "George, dear," cried Eveline "do you suppose Heaven is as nice a place as people say it is?" "Well, really, Eveline, as I have never been there, I cannot say, but from what I hear, the society is very select." "Everything is bright and golden there, isn't it, G-o-o-d?" "Yes, darling. The streets are paved with solid gold blocks. Golden bricks made the houses, and only specie payments are allowed." "Well, then, George," archly said the maiden, as she nestled closely to her lover, "if every thing is so golden, why don't the gilly get in?" But the answer came not. He had gone to be a cow-boy.

The Political Turmoil.

The two great parties have held their national conventions constructed their platforms, and put their candidates for President in the field. The contest will now go on with varying fortunes until election day, the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November (4th). The interest taken in elections in this country is in every respect wholesome. Some bad blood may be generated by the strife of partisans, but after all political discussions are an education to the mass of the community. They teach our people lessons of self-government and self-restraint. Whenever Americans care for other matters more than the conflicts of parties—when they refuse to vote—then will come the downfall of the Republic. There is a current illusion that the political agitation of Presidential years is hurtful to business, but it seems this is not true. Trade statistics show that, on the whole, our great national contests stimulate transactions in trade. It is, however quite true that the theaters and places of amusement in large cities are not so well patronized while the canvass is being actively prosecuted.

The strength of Lula Hurst, the strong girl from Georgia, is evinced by the fact that she raised a $3,000 mortgage on her father's farm.—Mayfield Monitor.

The telegraph announces the death of Lord Petree, and adds that he was the twelfth baron and left a family of twelve children. Had he been much baroner he would have left a whole orphan asylum.—Burlington Hawkeye.

A minister in Cleveland rode to church last Sabbath on a bicycle. As he swept up to the sacred edifice, a large Newfoundland dog, belonging to the senior deacon, came lumbering out to greet the pastor. The bicycle struck the canine head on, under a full head of steam, and run him down with a shock that could be plainly felt with the naked eye.

The reverend took a header, and jammed his high silk hat down over his ears so tight that he had to crawl clear through it to get out of it. The scattered leaves of a seven head sermon flew around the venue like a theological snow storm. The dog made Rome howl with his wails and attracted a crowd of three hundred people. The parson's cast was spun down the back, and his trousers ripped across the knees. He pinned up the knees, and he had to wear a pepper and salt sack coat the sexton loaned him. When he appeared in the pulpit in this garb, the congregation smiled, and when he announced his text, Second Kings, twelfth, sixth—"But it was so . . . the priests had not repaired the breaches"—there wasn't a dry eye in the convocation. And now the question before the church is: "Should the pastorate ride a bicycle to church, or has the deacon a Christian right to own a dog?"—Burlington Hawkeye.

On the 19th of July, Mr. H. F. McCamy had a watch and chain stolen from his office. A few days ago the watch was taken to Mr. J. M. Howe for repairs and that gentleman saw by the number that he had done work for Mr. McCamy on the same watch. He mentioned the matter and the man who had brought the watch to his store was arrested; he proved that he bought it from a negro boy named Dick Thomas, about 19 years old. Thomas was arrested Tuesday and put in jail on a charge of grand larceny, the watch being valued at $85. Yesterday morning he was brought out for trial and watching for an opportunity he made a dash for liberty. Policemen Felix Diggerstaff and Shipp Witty pursued him and after firing several shots at him captured him down on the river bank. He was tried and is now in jail in default of a $200 bond.

Demorest's Illustrated Monthly Magazine for September is an extremely useful and entertaining number. The tales and poems are excellent, and "The English Cathedral," "The Romance of the Century," and "Seeing New York," by Jenny June, are articles of unusual interest. There is much that will prove very useful in the household, in the way of fancy-work and fashion, and the illustrations add greatly to the attractiveness of this number. "Medea," a fine oil painting from the original by N. Sichel forms the frontispiece.

The little River Baptist Association, Capt. W. J. Stone, Moderator, is in session at New Bethel church, Lyon county, this week.

Esq. R. R. Turner died at Cerulean last Saturday, after an illness of several weeks. He was one of Trigg county's oldest citizens, and his death is universally regretted.

The Democrats of Christian county are requested to meet in mass convention at the courthouse to-morrow at 2 o'clock to select a new county committee or confirm the present one.

When you want substantial, fine jewelry and the latest styles at reasonable prices, call on M. D. Kelly. His prices are always the lowest, and he keeps the largest selection.

Miss Annie B. Cooke, of Houstonville, Ky., late teacher of vocal music in Hayne's Institute, Murfreesboro, Tenn., will have charge of the vocal music at the South Kentucky college.

The neck-tie and fruit lawn party at Mr. R. L. Boulware's this evening will undoubtedly be a most enjoyable affair. The young people especially should not fail to attend. Admission 25 cents. Sunday school scholars 10 cents.

The young people had a very pleasant little dance at the Rink Wednesday evening. The Clarksville Band came over to make the music. The occasion was highly enjoyed by those who attended.

Jas. M. Howe, our leading Jeweler has the largest line of new styles in gold and silver watches, lace pins, buttons, engagement rings, &c that has ever been seen in Hopkinsville, and his prices are lower than any other reliable house.

The Band of Harvesters will give a neck-tie and lawn party in connection with their jug breaking at the residence of Mr. R. L. Boulware, on the evening of Aug. 15th. The public is cordially invited. Admission 25 cts.

W. F. Read, one of Cerulean's best citizens, died at that place last week. He was a man highly esteemed by all who knew him, and his death causes a vacancy not easily filled. He leaves a family, wife and five children, who have the sympathy of all.

Mr. Johann P. Mueller, of Lebanon, Wis., teacher of the parochial school of the Lutheran pastor, Rev. Allward, and Mr. Fred Dahne arrived here on a prospecting tour last Tuesday. They intend to settle in South Christian, near Bennettstown.

Mr. Thos. Green has begun to rebuild his three stores burned on the northwest corner of Clay and Nashville streets. The stores will be much larger and handsomer than the ones destroyed. The front part of the block will be two stories high.

The South Kentuckian has added to its list 42 cash subscribers since the first day of August. We don't mention this in a boastful spirit, but to show that the people of Christian and surrounding counties know a good thing when they see it.

The abscesses on the editor's jaws are both running and throwing off matter, but his condition is slowly improving. He is now about free from opiate, though he is much enfeebled. It will be some weeks yet before he will be able to get around. His jaw is now so much improved that he can talk, and he will be glad to see his friends.—Madisonville Times.

A fire at Nortonville Wednesday night last week destroyed two large tobacco factories. One was the property of Thos. Drake of Slaughter'sville, and the other belonged to the estate of Jack Edmunds' dec'd, of Hopkinsville. With the exception of a wheat drill in one, both factories were empty. The fire is supposed to have been the work of an incendiary.—Madisonville Times.

Mr. R. West, of Todd county, was in the city yesterday and from him we learned of the sudden death of Harry P. Willoughby, county attorney of Todd, at Elkton, last Tuesday morning. He was on the streets at 8 o'clock and by 10 he was dead. His death was very unexpected. He was about 30 years old and was a very popular young lawyer.

BLOOD, IAGO, BLOOD!

The members of "Co. D." were considered agitated Monday by the receipt of a telegram ordering them to lay in a full supply of cartridges and hold themselves in readiness to march at a moment's notice. Pictures of grim visaged war in all of its horrors arose before the boys, but they are true grit and though they had no idea what the trouble was, most of them expressed not only a willingness, but a desire to go wherever their services were wanted. It seems that trouble was expected at the coal mines at Central City, in Muhlenburg county. On last Saturday 107 convicts were sent to the mines under a contract with the owners, to replace at 40 cents a day the miners who have been paid $1.50 a day. 193 others, making 301, are to be sent also for a term of two years. It was not known how the miners would receive their discharge, and instructions were sent to all of the companies of the First Regiment of State Guards to hold themselves in readiness for any hostile emergency. No demonstrations have yet been made and the order was merely a precautionary one.

CERULEAN SPRINGS.

Cerulean is now enjoying a season of unprecedented prosperity. Guests are numerous, water splendid, fare excellent, weather delightful and all things conducive to much pleasure and enjoyment.

Mr. Jno. A. Stratton, his excellent lady and little son, accompanied by Mrs. Angie Pogue, an elegant lady from Natchez, Miss., came down from Louisville Sunday. They have already formed a host of friends by their pleasant and agreeable manners and charming sociability. We hope their stay will be a protracted one.

Mr. John Taylor and wife, formerly of Christian county, now residents of Louisville, are here, accompanied by their niece, Jessie Barboe, a sweet little miss of six summers. They will remain several days longer.

Misses Lou Redd, Johnnie Mills, Beulah Ware and Kate Woodbridge, and Mrs. Woodbridge, Mrs. Gray and Mrs. Thompson, represent the ladies of Hopkinsville, and quite well do they sustain the reputation for beauty, grace and culture that is enjoyed by the ladies of your town.

Misses Mary and Hattie Grinter, two of Cadiz' most intelligent and entertaining young ladies, are spending the week at Cerulean. They have many friends and admirers among both ladies and gentlemen.

Mrs. J. J. Chappell, accompanied by her brother, J. E. Cooper, came over from Cadiz, Monday, and are still here. Her many friends hope that she will remain for some time yet.

Mrs. H. H. Bryant, and children, Misses Ida and Lula Baker and Miss Nannie Guthrie are spending the week here. They have a legion of friends here.

Miss Jettie Harper, a pretty, vivacious and piquant young lady of Evansville, Ind., is the guest of Miss Ora Harper. Miss Jettie by her pleasing deportment, is a great favorite at Cerulean, and her visits are always welcomed with pleasure.

Miss Lizzie Cox, a very pleasant and agreeable young lady from Newstead, spent several days of last week at Cerulean. By her sweet and amiable ways she won a large number of friends during her stay here.

Dr. C. P. Bacon and family, accompanied by Miss Sadie Hollingsworth, left for Roaring Springs, Tuesday, where they will remain a few days with relatives and then return to their home in Evansville. "Sit still my heart, sit still" is on the lips of several of the boys since their departure. One of them is dangerously "gone," at least he Sadie was.

The following gentlemen from Hopkinsville are here playing havoc with the hearts of unsuspecting maidens: Jno. Phelps, Will Tandy, and Jimmie Cooper.

Messrs. Dan Grinter, J. W. Williams, Geo. McCain and C. P. Grinter, from Cadiz, are here contributing their share of pleasure and amusement.

The old veteran, B. H. Hurt, ("Aunt Sally") went out into the cold, heartless world, Monday, and where his smiling presence once greeted our vision, there is now a yearning, aching void. During his stay some of us were constantly reminded of Bible notoriety, and we also thought often of cherry trees, hatches, &c.

The following drummers have enlivened the place with their presence this week:

W. M. West, Jas. R. Wiles, Louisville; Emmett Weeks, J. C. Lyon, Evansville; Fannie Goodwin, Nashville; John Pyle, W. E. McGary, Cincinnati; E. L. Mallory, Clarksville; J. E. Harris, Paducah.

J. T. Penn, one of Princeton's deservedly popular young men, returned home Monday, after a stay of several weeks. R.

On Wednesday the 13th inst., according to invitation, a party of young people met at the residence of Mr. Winston Winters, a half mile from Casky, and five miles from Hopkinsville. The attendance was good, considering there was a hop in Hopkinsville the same night. The young people present enjoyed themselves immensely, especially when supper was announced, and they congregated around a well loaded table. Supper over, they again adjourned to the sitting room where they passed away a couple of hours very pleasantly. When the time came for their departure they did so very reluctantly, thanking the kind host and hostess for the elegant refreshments and agreeable evening.

Exposition Views.

Mr. Clarence Anderson, of this city, has just finished the work of taking landscape views in this section, for exhibition at the Louisville Exposition. He has taken in all 127 views in the counties of Christian, Trigg, Lyon, Caldwell, Union, Henderson and Hopkins. The following are the views taken in this county:

Two views of Jas. A. McKenzie's house.

View of the hedge and pike in front of his house.

The old Dr. Bell homestead.

Three views from C. D. Bell's place.

Two views from J. F. Garnett's place.

View from Mr. Simmerhill's place, showing Hopkins place, Bell place and old Clardy place.

View showing Dr. T. F. Clardy's avenue and house.

View showing C. D. Bell's cows being milked.

Instantaneous view of C. D. Bell's fine chickens, about 200.

View at Longview looking south.

View from 2d toll gate on Clarksville pike, looking west.

View showing Dr. Jas. Wheeler's farm.

View from M. Turnley's yard, looking south.

View from M. Turnley's lawn, looking southwest.

View from South Kentucky College, looking east.

Same looking southwest, showing extreme southern portion of Hopkinsville.

View from Casky, showing Asylum dome in the distance.

Dr. J. A. Gunn's apiary of 124 hives.

View from a hill in rear of E. B. Long's, looking east, showing Eugene Mills in foreground and a landscape view of five miles.

Suburban view of Hopkinsville from hill on Russellville street.

View of stone bridge on north Main street.

Mr. Anderson also took a picture of Mr. McKenzie and family sitting on the porch of his residence and a similar view of Capt. C. D. Bell's family. These were not taken for the Exposition, however, as the former was taken for Prof. Proctor and the latter for Capt. Bell.

The liquor sellers of Hopkinsville will contest the election by which prohibition carried in the county upon the grounds that illegal votes were polled and that the officers of the election in three precincts were not sworn. It will come up Sept. 8, before the County Judge and three magistrates.

Mr. Blaine will attend the grand army reunion in jail, he will probably accompany him—Louisville Times.
